

Landing the Space Shuttle is hard enough as it is devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20090813-01

August 13, 2009

Raymond Chen

I was at The Museum of Flight and was waiting my turn at the Space Shuttle landing simulator. A six-year-old settled into the control seat, and as the simulation began I heard him ask his father, “Where are the bad guys?” I’m pretty sure the Space Shuttle doesn’t come with onboard missiles. That didn’t stop the kid from pressing the trigger on the joystick a lot, though.

By the way, I cratered the Space Shuttle.

Raymond Chen

Follow

