

How does Raymond get rid of his excess pennies?

 devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20091127-01

November 27, 2009

Raymond Chen

Commenter Boris mentions that he uses NJ Transit to get rid of his excess pennies. But what do you do if your area isn't served by NJ Transit? I use the self-checkout line at the grocery store. The machine has a slot for accepting coins, and you can drop pennies in there until your arm falls off. I don't do this when the grocery store is crowded, since this holds up the line.

(Yes, banks also have change-counting machines, but using the machine is overkill when you have only thirty pennies to get rid of.)

Raymond Chen

Follow

