

No, you can't lock icons to the user's desktop

 devblogs.microsoft.com/oldnewthing/20091222-00

December 22, 2009

Raymond Chen

In another installment of I bet somebody got a really nice bonus for that feature, I submit this question for your consideration.

My customer wants to know how to lock a specific icon to the upper left hand corner of the desktop.

This company must be writing the most awesome program to end all programs, a program so amazingly awesome that it should appear as the very first thing on the desktop so you won't forget how awesome it is. I think their users may disagree with that assessment.

And the answer is, no, there is no supported way to force a particular icon to appear at a particular desktop position.

Raymond Chen

Follow

